- An individual who is taxable at no more than basic rate can transfer this part of his or her allowance to a spouse or civil partner who is also only taxed at basic rate.

- The starting rate is for savings income only. If non-savings income is above this limit, then the starting rate for savings will not apply. The exempted income uses up tax bands and counts towards other income thresholds.
- These rates apply for England, Northern Ireland and Wales. Since April 2019, the Welsh assembly has had the power to vary income tax rates in Wales but has not done so to date.
- Dividends are treated as the top slice of income - applies for each band in which they fall.
- The dividend allowance effectively exempts the first £500 of dividends received.
- Rates applicable to most taxable income of Scottish residents (after personal allowances). However, the UK thresholds and rates will still apply to their savings and dividend income and capital gains.
- The tax rate for income used to pay qualifying trust management expenses is 10.75% in 2026/27 (8.75% in 2025/26) for dividend income and 20% for other income.
- From April 2027 higher rates will be introduced for savings and rental income at 2% above the main rates.
- From 6 April 2026, all carried interest is treated as trading profits subject to income tax and Class 4 NICs. The taxable amount of 'qualifying' carried interest will be adjusted by applying a 72.5% multiplier, resulting in a maximum effective tax rate of 34.075%.

Non-UK domiciliaries

From 6 April 2025 a residency-based regime applies giving a preferential tax treatment for four years from arrival to individuals who have been non-UK resident for ten consecutive years. There is transitional relief available via a temporary repatriation facility for designated foreign income and gains (FIG) available up to 5 April 2028 and rebasing. Read more here.
